Narrator: The Geheimerath Rödelein's house is a charming house to visit in, and he has two daughters, of whom the whole fashionable world proclaims (with enthusiasm) that they dance like goddesses, speak French like angels, and play and sing and draw like the Muses.

Narr. 23 Narrator: It is with an eye to these that, with the tea, punch, wine, ices, etc., a little music is always served up, which, like the other refreshments, is very quietly swallowed up by the fashionable world.
